HAND OF ARTIST SHOWN IN WORK

Exhibit by St. Mary's Benedictine Institute Reflects Credit on the Pupils.

Of the many schools of the city which have been holding their final exercises during the last week or two, none can boast of a more beautiful display than that exhibited by the art school of St. Mary's Benedictine Institute. The exhibit consists of oil and water colors and painting on china, together with decorative work on church robes.

The entire course of instruction is given by the sisters of the institution. Under their instruction the students have made remarkable progress, some of them having been in the school more than two or three months.

Some of those whose work is most worthy of mention are Miss Re. Dickerson, whose water-color work holds the most prominent positions on the walls of the studio. Mrs. Robert C. Perkins and Miss Frances Duncum showed some excellent paintings in oil.

The most elaborate part of the exhibition is the painting on china. While demanding the most careful work by the students it has to be turned several times in an oven of special design, requiring much attention. The oven used by this school is complete and modern in every particular, and is the only one of its kind in the city.

The exhibit of china alone, contains more than 350 pieces, the majority of which were painted by Misses Stumph, Griffith and Bright. It includes china of every imaginable description done in the most beautiful and delicate manner.

Heard and Seen in Public Places

Former Congressman William A. Young, of Norfolk, who is a prominent candidate in the four-cornered race now in progress for representative from the Second District, is in the city attending the convention of Eagles, of which order he is a leading member, and is stopping at Murphy's. Accompanying Mr. Young are City Sergeant John F. Lawler, former Delegate in the Legislature, J. Lyons, and Clerk James V. Trehy, all of whom are prominent Eagles.

When seen last night Mr. Young said that though his primary would not be held until August 25th, he had every reason to feel encouraged at the outlook. The other candidates for the nomination are Representative Harry L. Maynard, of Portsmouth; Colonel George C. Cabell, of Norfolk, and Mr. J. Peter Holland, of Southampton. Mr. Young represented the district in Congress for two terms, and was defeated for renomination by Mr. Maynard eight years ago in a spectacular three-cornered convention fight after a deadlock of many days.

A large number of prominent Democratic leaders were in the city last night, but their coming was not prearranged and had no particular political significance. For example, Representative Francis Rives Lassiter, of Petersburg, stopped over for a while on his way home from Washington, and knew not of the presence of other prominent party men who happened to be here. Major Lassiter expressed confidence in the result of his campaign for renomination. He is being opposed by Hon. Robert Turnbull, of Brunswick.

Senator C. Harding Walker, of Northumberland, is here on his way to the annual meeting of the board of visitors of the State Female Normal at Farmville, which meets there today. Senator Walker says his people are strongly in favor of maintaining the present primary system of nominating candidates for office. He is a delegate to the Roanoke convention.

Captain Frank P. Brent, formerly secretary to the State Board of Education, but for the past two years principal of a high school of Lancaster Court House, has returned to the city for his vacation, and was at Murphy's last night shaking hands with his friends. Captain Brent is widely known throughout the State.

"I believe ex-Governor J. Hoge Tyler, of Pulaski, will be one of the delegates at large to the national convention at Denver," declared Major John T. Cowan, of Montgomery, a prominent member of the State who can really be put down as an original Bryan advocate, who has never changed his views. Our section of the State is not only on record as favoring him, we are not falling to do some missionary work in his behalf among our brother Democrats in the Eastern section.

"We believe the Roanoke convention will honor him with a place among the big names, and the election of some very strong section of the State."

The stock of the former executive has advanced rapidly in the East during the past few weeks, and the general impression among good judges of political matters here seems to be that he will win out and go to Denver as a delegate at large.

Dr. J. G. Fernerhough, of Burkeville, State, has been elected to the city with his little son, George Lockwood, who was operated on several days ago at the Memorial Hospital. The operation was a simple one, and Dr. Fernerhough hopes to be able to take his son home in a few days.

State Senator John M. Parsons, of Grayson, perhaps the most popular Republican on the Democratic side of the chamber and the best handicapped in his party in this State, was a caller at the Capitol yesterday, having come to the city to interest the Department of Education in the establishment of high schools at Elk Creek and Independence, two progressive towns in his district.

These towns have raised their proportionate share of the money as required by law, in order to enable them

Senator Parsons had a most satisfactory conference with Superintendent Eggleston, of the Department of Education, and his people will very probably get what they want.

Mr. Parsons is a Republican pure and simple in matters that pertain to the important principles of his party, but he often refused last winter to be drawn into petty scrambles involving small partisan disputes, the result being that he stood well with the majority. It is said that he got through more local bills than all the other Republican members in both houses combined.

Senator John M. Hart, of Roanoke, is at Murphy's, having come to the city to look after some private affairs. Senator Hart is enthusiastic over the coming meeting of the Democratic State convention in his city, and he declares that the citizens will give the delegates and visitors a rousing reception.

Other prominent Virginians at Murphy's last night were Mayor Warburton, of Williamsburg; Hon. Thomas B. Murphy, of Alexandria, and Captain Carter Braxton, of Staunton.

A prominent Southwest Virginia Democrat, who was in the city last night, produced a ticket which is being flashed weekly at the head of the editorial page of the Wise News, whose editor, Mr. W. H. Eads, is one of the hottest members of the fourth estate in Virginia.

The ticket is in full as follows: Our Democratic Ticket—For President, William J. Bryan, of Nebraska; for Vice-President, William L. Doughton, of Massachusetts; for Congress, Ninth Virginia District, E. Lee Trinkle, of Wythe county; for Governor, Henry C. Stuart, of Russell county.

Mr. Eads is a shoulder-hitting Democrat, who believes in going straight after results, and in party campaigns he comes about as near calling a spade a spade as any man in the newspaper business. His political idols are William J. Bryan and Senator Bob Taylor, of Tennessee. He quotes freely from the Commonwealth and Bob Taylor's Magazine in his paper, and has always had the highest admiration for their contents. Mr. Eads is an ardent admirer of Mr. Stuart. On a recent visit here he told his friends that the Russell county man would sweep the Southwest for the governorship over the entire field. His candidate for Congress, Mr. Trinkle, is one of the best known young men in Southwest Virginia.

Mr. E. J. Best, formerly of Asheville, N. C., but now of Columbia, S. C., who is stopping at the Jefferson, is in the city to argue the case of W. F. Salpess, Southern Railway Company in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Mr. Best is considered one of the best posted young lawyers in this circuit on Federal practice and procedure.

He was formerly private secretary to United States Circuit Judge Jeter C. Pritchard, and is well known in this city.
